

The Brand Read

The Brand Read identifies the specific problem blocking a brand's next phase of growth.

It is a focused strategic assessment for founders and leadership teams who need clarity before moving into deeper brand, marketing, or growth work. It brings together an outside view of the brand, category, competitors, and customer-facing experience with the internal perspective of the people leading the business.

The outcome is not a perception report. It is a clear read on where the brand stands, where alignment is missing, and what needs to be solved before strategy begins.

Not a workshop. Not market research. Not a branding exercise.

WHO IT IS FOR

Leadership teams at a point of change.

Companies preparing for growth, entering a new market, launching a new offer, repositioning the business, or going through brand, marketing, or AI-driven transformation.

This includes early-stage companies shaping how they are understood in the market for the first time, as well as established brands whose positioning, marketing, or internal alignment has not kept pace with the business.

WHAT YOU LEAVE WITH

Clarity on what needs to be solved.

A diagnosis of what is limiting brand and market momentum.

A clear view of where leadership perspectives align, diverge, or create friction.

An outside assessment of the brand, category, competitive landscape, and customer-facing experience.

The specific brand and marketing priorities that need attention next.

HOW IT WORKS

1

Outside-in Assessment

A review of the brand, category, competitors, customer experience, communications, and market context.

2

Leadership Conversations

Focused conversations with key leaders to understand priorities, assumptions, and different perspectives across the organization.

3

Working Session

A session with the leadership team to review findings, surface misalignment, and align around what needs to be solved next.

4

The Brand Read Memo

A concise strategic document in plain language. Where the brand stands today. What is creating friction. Where alignment exists and where it does not.
